

Party Scorecard : Education

We collated education's evidence-based policy measures from our Tick 4 Kids coalition partners and chose the most popular five to test our party candidates on.

The results are as follows:

	Do you support increased funding for learning support to ensure that children with special educational needs and disabilities can fully participate and achieve in early childhood education, primary and secondary education?	Do you support increased funding for more teachers (to reduce teacher to child ratios) and their ongoing quality professional development across early childhood education, primary and secondary education?	Do you support Te Reo to be made compulsory learning for all children in Aotearoa New Zealand?	Will you call for a child-centred approach when developing all plans to advance public education?	Do you support the development of an independent complaints mechanism for children and their families experiencing violations and abuses of their rights?

We need more evidence

For the fairest future, every child deserves quality education.

We need a longterm Education plan that will ensure inclusive education, minimize the privatization of education, and ensure schools remain the hub of the community in an ever-changing world. We need leaders committed to Te Reo in schools (as well as Sign, because these are our nation's first languages alongside English). Appropriate teacher:child ratios, a child-centred approach to education reform, and an independent complaints mechanism are just some of the measures needed to ensure quality education is assured for every child.
